

Diversity Requirement II.2: Dimensions of Diversity

Criteria

For category II.2, at least half the course must be focused on dimensions of diversity, such as race, ethnicity, and gender, that are of particular importance in understanding contemporary society in the United States. Although the analytical categories must be applicable to understanding diversity within the United States, the specific cases under consideration may be situated elsewhere (i.e., courses that examine these dimensions in general theoretical terms or outside of the United States may be considered for this category).

Faculty who believe that a particular course or set of courses fulfills the expectations of the requirement without conforming precisely to the listed criteria may petition the Committee on Instruction for approval. The committee will make determinations on a case by case basis.
